HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT AND PRODUCTION TECHNIQUES

APH Publishing Corporation, 2010. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. We are on the threshold of the 21st century. To enter the new era, we have to equip ourselves inter alia with the Knowledge of new frontiers in materials Science and Technology This is a multi-disciplinary activity concerned with the generation and application of new advances relating to the composition, structure and Processing of ever new materials to required Standards and uses. Exotic and unbelievable variety of combinations and compositions of inorganic, organic, inorgano-organic products are arriving to satisfy our basic needs such as transportation, communication, constructional structures and so on. The paradigm for these new materials is that they should be longer lasting, lighter, smaller, lower in cost, recyclable. They would be capable of being processed with locally available and sample Technologies economically, but increased performance. Economy can be achieved by `integrated design, Manufacturing and use approach` by `tailored` `engineered materials` which can lead to overall cost-effective application as compared to conventional materials and their use. This can be realised by upgrading the quality and performance of existing materials by value addition, and producing new materials of sorts to meet our specific Industrial and user needs To drive technological change, national security and `economic liberalisation` into the next century, we need among others Advanced materials. Many developing Countries do not have the resources for development of Strategic materials from locally available sources. It is this context that the need for Synthetic substitutes and their application becomes relevant rather urgent. In many fields, service requirements are outpacing the existing materials. For example, increased attention is now being paid to composites which are particularly feasible for Aircraft structures due to their high stiffness, Strength and weight-ratio. It is to fill is gap between Supply and Demand for new Structural materials, and to solve...
